FOUR LINDEN BOARD OF ED MEMBERS TAKE OATH OF OFFICE

The Linden Board of Education swore in three new members and one returning member at its annual organization meeting held on January 8, 2018. It was also the first meeting for a member appointed in November.

Returning member Tracey Anne Birch and newcomers Ahmed Shehata and Katarzyna Kozak were sworn in to three-year terms. Sheenaider Guillaume took the oath for a two-year unexpired term.

All four were elected on November 7, 2017.

Elizabeth Welsh took her seat at the meeting after being sworn in in November. She was appointed following the resignation of board member Alexander Alvarez.

The new board chose Raymond J. Topoleski as its president and Theresa Villani as its vice president.

The board voted to set the meeting schedule for 2018, with regular meetings scheduled for the fourth Tuesday of every month, at Linden High School during the school year, and at the Board offices located at 2 E. Gibbons Street during the summer months.

LINDEN FIRE DEPARTMENT NEW EQUIPMENT

The City of Linden Fire Department has recently purchased and has put into service new Scott Air-Pak SCBA and support equipment. This new Self Contained Breathing Apparatus will allow city firefighters to work longer and more efficiently, as well as stay safer at a fire scene. This new state of the art equipment meets new NFPA 2013 standards for safety, the department's old obsolete SCBA equipment's life expectancy was expiring and would be no longer be able to be used.

The firehouse's SCBA filling stations and SCBA rescue equipment for the departments rescue truck. One of the new tools obtained with this purchase was for firefighter safety; it is called the PAK Tracker Firefighter Locator System. This system provides advanced technology that will transmit a radio frequency from a downed or trapped firefighter's SCBA pack to a hand held receiver that that will help in finding the location of the distressed firefighter. This tool is ideal for the use in anything from industrial complexes and large warehouses all the way through to single family homes.

The Linden Fire department is excited about implementing this new equipment, which can only assist city firefighters in providing the best and most up-to-date fire service to the citizens and businesses of the city of Linden.

MESSAGE FROM CITIZENS ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT

Submitted by Rich Gerbounka

As the Linden Citizens Association's new President, I would like to introduce myself and our organization to any Linden resident that is not familiar with us.

The Linden Citizens Association is a 26-year old political organization that promotes good government in our City. We support Democrats, Republicans, or Independents and guide new candidates through the political process that is required to run for elected office. The sole requirement is that the candidate's interests are to make our City a better place to live and raise a family.

Belonging to our organization does not require campaigning for anyone. Many members came to our meetings just to learn what is happening in Linden and offer their concerns and suggestions. Certain members of City Council attend our meetings and report on current events or recently adopted policies by the Mayor and governing body.

Membership fees are $10 a year. We meet every third Thursday night at 7 p.m. at the V.F.W. Hall on Pennsylvania Railroad Avenue. This street is just off Wood Avenue, perpendicular to the Linden Train Station, and parallel to the railroad tracks.

We would love to have you attend. Remember that in a democracy the people receive the government they demand.

For further information, you can reach me at 908-486-7554 or rich617lnj@gmail.com

3-D PRINTING GIVES SOEHL STUDENTS A GLIMPSE OF THE FUTURE

A 3-D printer can create just about anything, including an opportunity for Linden middle school students to envision a new future.

About two dozen students recently gathered in the Soehl Middle School cafeteria, to see a 3-D printer in action, creating a small plastic rocket for a board game. The session was part of an ongoing program to allow them to learn of career pathways in advanced manufacturing.

The students were tasked with coming up with new designs for the little rocket, using simple materials including cardboard tubes, pipe cleaners and construction paper.

“Hopefully an activity like this kind of lights that spark and they can take it and run with it on their own,” stated Principal Richard Molinaro. “They can find classmates they can share these ideas with, and hopefully even share these ideas with their parents and say, ‘This is something I’m really interested in, I had a lot of fun doing it,’ and hopefully they can pursue it beyond what we did here today.”

The program was led by Joe Hudicka, who runs Fizzee Labs along with his wife, Lora, and kids Joey, 15, and Heidi, 10 – all of whom took part in the program. Joey, who explained the workings of the 3-D printer to the students and visitors, said the program is meant to help students “unlock their creative potential.”

The students, as well as parents who visited for the day, worked in small groups to come up with alternative designs for small plastic rockets that the 3-D printer was creating for a board game called “Launch” that the Hudickas created. Each group was given a specific material it could use to create their prototype. But they were also given Fizzee Labs “money” and were encouraged to barter or buy material from other groups.

“You’ll notice when you move from table to table that you’ll now see a blend,” Joe Hudicka said as the students were working on their prototypes. “This table has their pipe cleaners and paper, but it also has some clay. Clearly, they were able to work out a deal with the clay table. So, you’ll see a mix. When they opened up their bags, they all had different materials.”

Students were given an hour to create their prototypes, which is about how long it took the 3-D printer to create one of the original plastic rocket pieces. When they were done, representatives of each group explained their design.

“It got their minds thinking, and hopefully they’re going to take this knowledge and carry it into high school and beyond,” Molinaro said.

Hudicka talked to the students about the practical aspects of science. He took the familiar concept of STEAM (science, technology, engineering, arts, and math) and changed it to ESSTEAM by adding economics and sociality.

“Those are the how’s and the why’s,” he told them.

He also got the students’ attention by asking them if they knew in what state mass manufacturing got its start. “I’ll give you a hint,” he stated. “You kind of go to school there.”

The session was part of state Department of Education program to help students explore science, engineering, math, information technology, and advanced manufacturing. The same Soehl students also took part in a program in June at Kean University to explore those areas.

“So, we have this event to continue with the advanced manufacturing,” stated Lori Howard, communications director for the Department of Education’s Division of Teaching and Learning. “That’s something they really need to do hands-on to learn more about that and what they need to do to pursue different types of careers. It’s increasing their exposure. It’s nice to build on something we did, so it’s not just a one-stop thing.”

Also participating in the program was Joshua Miller, an engineering student at Montclair State University who helped the Hudickas in developing their board game, which is aimed at young entrepreneurs. He told the Soehl students about the academic path he followed to set his sights on 3-D printing and advanced manufacturing – after initially wanting to be a musician.

Glen Barlics, of Inman Molding and Manufacturing in Rahway, spoke to the students about what comes next in the process after a piece is designed and created by a 3-D printer. Molds must be created to mass produce an item, he told them. Hudicka pointed out that it would take years if every individual rocket had to be produced by the 3-D printer.

“What I saw today was students and parents working together on an ingenious idea,” Molinaro stated. “They were learning how things get manufactured, putting their ideas together, building rocket ships from household items, learning how to barter with each other from group to group – it was an excellent activity.”

The students who took part are: Michael Albuquerque, Lauren Almeida, Ekeoma Amadi, Joseph Argueta, Tatiana Burke, Eddy Charles, Gabriella Cieza, Marwin Clavijo, Kayla Delbrune, Brielle Ellis, Jorge Flechas, Claryssa Forde, Natalie Giraldo, Richard Gyan, Shekinah McIntyre, Abigail Meima, Brandon Miller, Paolo Nolasco, Victoria Pirgo, Abel Porras, Samantha Pugliese, Giselle Riera Torres, Rocio Santiago, Karla Suarez, Victoria Tomczyk, Olga Lopez Valladares, and Omar Yanes.

LIBRARY PRESENTS AUTHOR MATTHEW HAHN

READING FROM HIS NEW BOOK 'THE ANIMATED MARX BROTHERS'

The Linden Public Library proudly presents Matthew Hahn, noted author and Marx Brothers' fan, as he will sign and read from his new book, "The Animated Marx Brothers."

The event will take place on Monday, February 26, 2018 at 7:00 p.m. in the Columbia Bank Room of the library, located at 31 East Henry Street in Linden.

Hahn's book highlights the comedy team's long history in animation, dating from the early 1930s through more recent times. While the brothers' images and mannerisms are recognizable in American pop culture even to this day, a reviewer notes that "the descriptions and still pictures make the reader want to put the book down every few entries to watch the cartoons Hahn has described." This event is a "must see" for all Marx Brothers' fans as well as fans of animation.

Published by Bear Manor Media, the book will be available for purchase at the event. All are welcome and the library has free, off-street parking. Light refreshments will be served and provided by the Friends of the Linden Library.

Founded in 1928, the Linden Public Library celebrates its 90th anniversary in 2018.

JAZZ NIGHT AT THE LIBRARY

Come join us at Linden Library, on Wednesday, February 21, at 7 p.m., for Jazz Night by the MRB Jazz Project Trio comprising of Michael Pasqua on piano, Bruce Riccitelli on percussion, and Gerry Babo on acoustic bass.

Their repertoire encompasses music that virtually spans the past ninety years of American songwriting, including classic jazz compositions, along with their unique interpretations of the Great American Songbook, often popularized on stage and screen. From romantic ballads to up-tempo swing tunes, be-bop to jazz waltzes, MRB Jazz Project always weaves a diverse tapestry of music to appeal to a wide variety of musical tastes.

There will also be some added flavor with sultry Brazilian bossa novas or other Latin inflected tunes to round their performance.

7TH ANNUAL CELEBRATION OF AFRICAN AMERICAN HISTORY

Linden's 7th annual celebration of African American History will be held on Thursday, February 15, 2018 from 6 – 8 p.m. in the Linden Multi-Purpose Center 1025 John St, Linden. The event is free. Light refreshments will be served.

The event is hosted by Linden Councilwoman Rhashonna Cosby- Hurling in partnership with the Division of Public Property and Community Affairs. It will include a musical performance by the Linden Magriol Singers, a presentation of awards for the city-wide essay and poster contests, and the recognition a notable local African American: Mrs. Atiya Perkins. This year's honoree has made a great many valuable contributions to the Linden community as an educator and an administrator.

Cosby says, "When one thinks of people making history, we should always acknowledge individuals who are often in the background making sure things are done because they are some of the African Americans who are today, making history. I am excited that we are able to once again recognize people in our community, and I believe we should give people their flowers when they can smell them."

In 2011, it was Cosby who organized the first ever Black History program in the 5th Ward. She also initiated the annual designation of a portion of Blancke St. (in front of City Hall) as "African American Way" for the month of February. "In 2018 Women are still besieged in a male dominated world and I am pleased that we have such a worthy woman to honor this year.", Says Cosby. She continued with, "Mrs. Perkins is an inspiration to girls everywhere especially those whose lives she has touch right here in Linden."

Linden students are encouraged to submit original poems or essays about "A black person who inspires them" to the Councilwoman no later than February 12, 2018 for a chance to win a cash prize. Submissions should be sent via email to rcosby@linden-nj.org.

COMPUTER-CODING LESSONS TAKE FLIGHT

Submitted by Gary Miller

As a teacher, you know you're doing something right when your students are so excited about what they're learning that they beg to stay after the bell rings.

That's the situation Howard Schulz, a technology teacher at McManus Middle School in Linden, found himself in recently when his students applied what they were learning in his computer coding class to flying drones.

The students – about 120 7th- and 8th-graders – were given what sounds like the simple task of launching the drones from one side of the cafeteria, flying them around a cone at the other end of the room, and landing them back where they started. But these were not remote-controlled drones. All the flying had to be pre-programmed using the skills the students learned in class.

"Every class that week was very excited, very focused," Schulz said of the lesson in December. "They were like, 'We've got to do this.' And the people who didn't succeed, at the end of the class they were saying, 'Can I have five more minutes?' No, you've got to go to class."

Landing the drones in a square taped off on the cafeteria floor took a lot of trial and error. Students worked in small groups on getting the commands exactly right, and ran flight after flight, modifying their commands based on the results.

"There's a lot of variables in this," Schulz told a group of visitors that included Superintendent Danny A. Robertozzi, Assistant Superintendent Denise Cleary, Business Administrator and Board Secretary Kathleen Gaylord, and Director of Technology Michael Walters. "If you have a window open and a breeze comes in, the drone will go from going forward to going up in the air. It is challenging, and they are coding."

During their visit, Dr. Robertozzi and Mr. Walters sat with 8th-grader Isabelle Brito, who taught them the basics so they could give it a try.

"It's a lot harder than it looks," Dr. Robertozzi said. "But Mr. Schulz and these students are doing an amazing job at taking what they're learning in the classroom and applying it in a real-world setting. Technology like this is vital to their education going forward, and this lesson gives them a small glimpse at what's possible."

In the classroom, students are learning to code using Swift, an Apple language for developing apps in iPads and iPhones.

"The drones were a set of lessons to practice what we've learned so far – giving simple commands, trying to run for-loops, creating functions – basically taking what we've learned in the classroom and applying it to a real-life situation," Schulz said.

"The students get a little bit bored of coding with puzzles, so we try to bring in something that piques their interest. I was able to find refurbished drones on Amazon. It was really to get them excited again about the coding and to do something fun with them before the holidays."

And the students' reaction?

"Well, we're back in the classroom now, and everybody is saying, 'When are we going back to the cafeteria?'" Schulz said. "I say, 'We have to go back into the classroom for a little while, then we'll go back.'"

"I think they really like it and they want to do more with it."
