MINIATURE THERAPY HORSE VISITS CHATHAM SENIORS

By Maryanne Christiano-Mistretta

When it comes to loving people, Michelangelo doesn't horse around.

"He loved people from the time he was little," said Maureen Coultas, owner of miniature therapy horse, Michelangelo, and director of Hope's Promise, 34 South Road, Chester, New Jersey.

"Messenger of God" is the meaning of the name Michelangelo. Coultas thought the name was appropriate not only because of the mark of a cross on the horse's forehead, but because of how good he is with people. Coultas brings him to visit schools, colleges, nursing homes, libraries, and assisted living facilities. On February 2, 2018 Coultas came to Senior Services Center of The Chathams, 58 Meyersville Road, Chatham, New Jersey.

During the visit, Coultas gave a 45-minute presentation teaching the seniors about miniature horses, which are smaller than ponies. Ponies are 38 inches or taller; Michelangelo is between 32 to 33 inches and weighs 250 pounds. And he's 4-years-old. He also wears sneakers so he's protected from slipping on a wood or tile floor.

Michelangelo's first therapy visit was with a group of special needs children. A 3-year-old child was unable to walk without a walker. However, she was so excited to see Michelangelo, she walked towards him without a walker, according to Coultas.

"He's different with children with special needs," she said. "He likes children with special needs better."

At another visit in a nursing home a man was feeling down in the dumps, but he was thrilled to see Michelangelo and his spirits lifted.

Coultas got Michelangelo when he was just 4-months-old. She said she loved all animals growing up and would bring home birds, chipmunks, and squirrels. "I always wanted a horse," she said. "I started saving when I was 8; and got my first horse at 40."

When she realized how therapeutic having a horse was, she wanted to "pay it forward." In addition to Michelangelo, Coultas has four other miniature therapy horses. All the horses are trained to go inside buildings and elevators. They will even go in a bedroom to visit a bed-ridden individual.

Following the presentation, seniors were able to pet and take photos with Michelangelo.

"It's like petting velvet," said Marilyn Chaplin, a visitor at the Center. She also said she felt less stressed after petting him.

The event was sponsored by IKOR in Gillette, New Jersey. Matt Finnie, managing director of IKOR, compares therapy horses to therapy dogs. He said, "They interact well with people. They want love and attention. People love to give it back."

New Jersey, on February 15.

In lieu of flowers, the family asked to donate to the GoFundMe page to assist the Failla family with the final resting costs and the creation of a foundation for under privileged kids to play the sports they love. In two days, $55,690 of the $50,000 goal was raised by over 600 people.

Sam worked as a snowboard instructor at a ski resort in Vail. This was his second season; and he was beloved by the kids in the ski school, as well as his coworkers.

According to The Denver Post, Sam was separated from a friend while skiing. A mountain rescue team found the friend and it was assumed that Sam had returned home safely. However, Sam was still missing. Then rescuers from the Vail Mountain Rescue Group and Vail ski instructors soon found his body.

According to Vail Daily, Eagle County, Colorado coroner Kara Bettis said the cause of Sam Failla's death would be determined

The Chatham Community tragically lost 24-year-old ski instructor, Samuel John Failla. He died during a ski accident on February 6, 2018 in East Vail, Colorado. The funeral was held at Corpus Christi Church, Chatham, following an autopsy. As of the writing of this article, the cause of death was still unknown.

Sam was a captain of the Chatham Cougar football team, graduating Chatham High School in 2012. He continued his education at the University of South Carolina where he received a Bachelor of Arts degree in 2016. He was a member of the Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity.

On his Linked-In page, Sam said he was "a hardworking and dedicated international relations and affairs major with a business administration minor and a focus on economics. I have a passion for business and also the environment. The hope is to combine the two and forge a successful career, whether it be creating awareness for the environmental problems around us or helping create new programs that educate people to the dangers we face."

He said he "worked in a team-oriented environment to instruct and assess ski ability of clients ranging in age from 2 to 75."

Sam earned his Professional Ski Instructors of America Association (PSIAA) Level 1 Certification.

In addition to skiing and snowboarding, he enjoyed travel and children. During his high school and college years, he babysat neighborhood children. And his travels took him to Singapore, Thailand, and Greece.

Sam is survived by his parents, John and Whitney Failla; and two sisters, Alexandria and Ellie Failla; all of Chatham, New Jersey.
